BASEBALL BRIEFS.

Centerfielder Cuto of the Portsmouth team of the Virginia league, who recently joined the Portsmouth team from the Cincinnati National league team, broke a leg while sliding into second base in a post-season game at Newport News, Va.

Howard Ehmke, recently purchased from the New York State league by the Detroit Tigers, was the shutout king of the New York State league. He whitewashed his opponents in 12 games, thus blanking every club in the league and has more victories to his credit than any other pitcher has ever won in the league. Previous to this record, Alexander was one under Ehmke with 29 wins in 1910.

Earl Pottier, leading batter in the Eastern league and outfielder of the Worcester club, left yesterday for his home in Pottsville, Pa., where he says he will assist his father in business, playing ball only as a sideline in the Delaware league. Pottier's retirement from the game is due to a fine of $50 imposed upon him for not obeying a signal and when Manager Hamilton asked him the reason, Pottier attacked him, striking his manager in the face.

Arthur Nehf, who was recently reported to be ill with symptoms of typhoid fever, is rapidly recovering and is expected to be in condition to work on the mound for the Braves within a few days.

Reports are circulating that a "bad tooth on Evers' lower jaw may be the reason for his neuritis, as it is known that the teeth are often the cause of nerve inflammation. It was decided that Evers be put under the X-ray and Dr. Whalen took him to a hospital yesterday for some photographs. Business Manager Hagood was in receipt of some of the photographs last night, which show that Evers has a tooth growing upward into the jawbone instead of downward in its natural way, and that the only way of removing it is to chisel it out.

Manager Bill Carrigan of the Boston Red Sox announced Tuesday that there was no joke in the rumor that he would retire from baseball at the close of the present season. In confirming the report, the steaming manager of the Red Sox stated that he had grown tired from the sport and did not have to play ball for a living, as he has a farm in Lewiston, Me., that needs his attention and since the death of his father-in-law, he has several other interests placed upon his shoulders. Carrigan came to the Red Sox from Holy Cross college 10 years ago last June, and has been one of the star catchers in the league since the following year. One of the first sensational games that he participated in was the memorable game that Joe Harris pitched against Jack Combs on Sept. 1, 1906, the game lasting 24 innings. There has been a good deal of comment since his intentions of retiring have been known as to whom the managerial duties will fall on. Hoblitzel, Wagner and Barry are all in line for the berth with the suggestion of McGraw and Connie Mack coming to Beantown.

ALONG THE SIDELINES.

The Harvard team has a wealth of material from their freshman team of last season. Among the players that have already reported to practice from last year's freshmen are G. L. Batchelder, H. F. Flower, W. B. Felton and R. H. Bond. With this string of men to rely upon, Harvard has the strongest squad of recruits to draw from of any of the college eleven. The quartet are all heavy, fast and good on the defense as well as the offense, and will show themselves of great use to the Harvard coaches before the season is over. Batchelder is the heavy weight of the team while Bond showed more speed than any of the others in last season's games.

Eddie Shea, a former Exeter athlete, is one of the assistant coaches under "Speedy" Rush at Princeton this fall.

Walter F. Spencer, the former Springfield and Hartford high football player, is expected to be of great help at Hamilton college this fall. He will be Coach Larry Bankart's assistant.

Medford high gave their first call for football candidates Tuesday afternoon, when about 80 husky warriors of the gridiron responded to Coach James Mansfield. Edward Larkin, the giant guard of last year's team, is captain of the eleven. Prospects of a fast team are very good.

Management

NOMINEE IN THE BEST OF SPIRITS

Has Every Reason for Confidence, He Declares in New York

New York, Sept. 14.—Denial of the report that there were to be changes in the Republican national campaign management was made by Mr. Hughes almost as soon as he reached New York yesterday morning. The nominee was in good health and spirits as he closed his 14,000-mile tour of the country. He stated that everywhere a great deal of interest in the campaign had been shown and that the cordiality of the people had been very marked. He went to Bridgehampton yesterday afternoon to stay until the first of next week, when he will again take the stump. From that time on there will be no real let-up for the nominee until election day.

Returns from the primaries in the various states are slowly coming to hand. Cole Blaise has been defeated in South Carolina and Senator Poincote is ahead in his fight for a renomination in the state of Washington.

Figures to show that the Democratic gain in total vote was much larger than the Republican gain are given out by the White House statisticians, who have been studying the results of the Maine election.

BOSTON & MAINE TO PAY LEASED- LINE DIVIDENDS

Concord & Montreal Stockholders Receive
Word From Receiver Hustis That They May Expect Their Usual 7 Per Cent.

Concord, N. H., Sept. 14.—New Hampshire stockholders in the Concord & Montreal railroad, leased to the Boston & Maine, have received the cheerful announcement that Receiver Hustis of the latter railroad will pay the annual rental of 7 per cent and checks will be sent to the stockholders of the Concord & Montreal on Oct. 1 as though nothing had happened. Of the $2,600 shares of Concord & Montreal, $3,891 are held in this state. In the case of the Boston & Maine bonds, the holders will have to await the decisions of the courts regarding the payment of the interest which is now overdue. Receiver Hustis, taking the position that while the road has the money to pay the interest, it needs it for other purposes. The rentals on the other New Hampshire leased lines do not come due at once and the receiver has time to determine what action will be taken in each. It is believed, however, that rentals will be paid as they become due.

BOMB PLANTER ON TRIAL.

Warren K. Billings Charged with Causing Death of 10 Persons.

San Francisco, Sept. 14.—Warren K. Billings, a machinist, charged with planting the suitcase bomb whose explosion caused the death of 10 persons and injuries to 40 more on preparedness day here July 22, went on trial Tuesday for his life. Asst. Dist. Atty. James F. Brennan, in his address to the jury, said he expected to prove that the metal pieces used in the construction of the bomb were identical with metal scraps found in Billings' room. Superior Court Judge Frank H. Dunne, presiding at the trial, ruled that the metal parts could be introduced for identification, but not as evidence. Four other persons, including one woman, are under indictment in connection with the bomb plot and will be tried separately.

TROOPS NEED COMFORT KITS.

Appeal Made By American Red Cross for Men on Mexican Border.

Washington, Sept. 14.—An appeal for donations for comfort kits for the use of the American troops on the Mexican border was made by the American Red Cross yesterday. It was issued in response to a request from the Red Cross supply depot at El Paso, Tex., which said that comfort kits were needed more than anything else by the troops. In a general announcement concerning the needs of the troops, the Red Cross suggested that no more donations of abdominal bands, typhus bags and goggles be sent to the border.

TROOPS TO STAY ON BORDER.

Sec. Baker Says Length of Stay Depends on Status of Situation.

Washington, Sept. 14.—To set at rest rumors that various units of the National Guard soon were to be withdrawn from the border, Sec. Baker reiterated Tuesday that there was no fixed policy regarding the maintenance of the state troops there and that the length of their stay depended on the status of the border situation. He said they would be brought home as soon as they could be spared without increasing the danger to life and property in the border section.

MAINE VOTE A RECORD; 152,000 AT THE POLLS

The Republican Plurality 13,507 on the Final Count—McGillicuddy Lost
by Only 630.

Augusta, Me., Sept. 14.—Practical completion of vote counting yesterday showed that the election Monday was a record breaker in the history of Maine. One hundred and fifty-two thousand citizens voted. The highest number to vote previously was 147,000 in 1884.

The revised figures yesterday make the Republican plurality for Governor 13,507. Hale's lead over Johnson for United States senator (long term) stood at 9,805. Bert M. Fernald, Republican, won the short term United States senatorship by 12,675.

Little change was recorded in the count for representatives in the four districts, the Republicans holding a good majority in each district but the second, where W. H. White, Jr., Republican, defeated D. J. McGillicuddy, Democrat, by only 630. The other three margins ran from 2,300 to 4,000.

GOV. GATE SATISFIED.

Went Into Fight for Principle—Page Ran Stronger Than Expected.

St. Albans, Sept. 14.—Gov. Charles W. Gates yesterday expressed himself as not having been surprised at the outcome of the senatorial primaries Tuesday in which he was a candidate against Senator C. S. Page, of Hyde Park, and Allen M. Fletcher of Cavendish.

Furthermore, the governor said that he was satisfied. He has nothing to regret or to take back. "I am very grateful to my friends who stood by me in this fight," he declared, "and I know that every vote cast for me came unsolicited and was the free expression of personal choice."

The governor said he had not deceived himself as to the outcome, adding the vote in Franklin county was 81 more than he had allowed himself. In some places he polled more than he had expected to while in others he fell behind his expectations, but the result was approximately what he had anticipated. Tuesday night when incomplete returns were given him, the governor said that Senator Page was running a little stronger than he had looked for, while Mr. Fletcher was running behind.

"I went into this fight for a principle," said the governor, "and I have nothing to regret." I made a clean canvass and did not put money into it. Some of my friends say that I did not make the best of my opportunities, and from a political standpoint they are right, but there is a satisfaction in it all to me."

The governor said that several weeks ago he saw that he could not hope to win but he stayed in because he had entered as a matter of principle. The governor was in town yesterday on his way to the southern part of the state on official business.

LAW FAVORING MAINE MILK PRODUCERS VOID

Act Which Required Payment By Retail-

Portland, Me., Sept. 14.—An act passed by the last legislature under which purchasers of milk and cream for selling or manufacturing purposes were required to pay producers semi-monthly, was yesterday declared unconstitutional by the supreme court.

Bar Harbor Attacked.

Bar Harbor, Me., Sept. 14.—Ralph Pulitzer, publisher of New York, his family and servants were quarantined by the board of health here yesterday on account of infantile paralysis. His son, Ralph, has the disease, it is announced. The family of Arthur Train, a New York attorney, was placed in quarantine in connection with the case.

What Happened.

Willie had tried by various means to interest his father in conversation. "Can't you see I'm trying to read?" said the exasperated father. "Now don't bother me."

Willie was silent for almost a minute. Then, reflectively, "Awful accident in the subway to-day."

Father looked up with interest. "What's that?" he asked. "An accident in the subway?"

"Yes," replied Willie, edging toward the door. "A woman had her eye on a seat and a man sat on it."

The Admirable Mr. Starkweather

By EDWARD T. STEWART

In the autumn I was invited to visit my friend, Mrs. Swinburne, who never returns to the city till November and sometimes later. I found there Miss Edith Harley, a young lady friend of Mrs. Swinburne. Miss Harley was very attractive, but she seemed to be absorbed in something. It was not long before I discovered that it was a young man. Whenever the family car came from the railway station she would rush to the door, then turn away disappointed.

When she and I were together she was constantly saying: "That reminds me of a friend of mine, who is very clever. He does everything so well. He was graduated at the head of his class in college and at the law school. Not that he is a bookworm or a grumbler or anything like that; he goes in for athletics. He has taken a lot of championship prizes at tennis and golf and is considered the best billiard player in his club."

"An Admirable Crichton," I put in. "A what?"

"Did you never hear of the Scotchman of that name who a couple of hundred years or so ago could out-jump, out-fence, outride any other man in the world?"

I felt much irritated at this fellow who was standing between me and a very pretty girl, and I suppose my words and the tone in which they were spoken indicated a desire to make a supposititious case a real one. Miss Harley made no further remark, and, looking at her face, I saw a faint smile, which I interpreted as indicating something between pity and contempt for one who even hinted that he might in any respect down this remarkable friend of hers.

There was a little room in Mrs. Swinburne's house off the dining room containing a writing desk and materials for correspondence. I went in there one morning to write a letter, and there on the desk was a sheet of note paper with the following words on it:

Dear Alano—When are you coming? We have no end of things to do when you arrive which we are keeping till you—

The note stopped here. It had evidently been left by mistake. Looking down into a wastebasket beside the desk, I saw an envelope addressed to Alano L. Starkweather, 110 North Walnut street. This, too, was unfinished, but Miss Harley had told me the city which her admirable friend honored by his presence, and I was thus led to believe that the unfinished letter had been intended for him.

If she is too modest to send for her paragon, I thought, I will help her out. I wished to get sight of one who was fast becoming my rival, for, though I did not know it, I was falling in love with Miss Harley. I concluded to send the note to Mr. Starkweather, unfinished as it was. Doubtless he would understand that he was pined for, but the piner was too modest to tell him so. There were some envelopes in the desk with the Swinburne address on the corner, and I put the unfinished note in one of them, addressed and mailed it. This was something I had no right to do, but I was mad with love and jealousy and scarcely responsible.

A few days later, after a spat with Miss Harley over her friend's accomplishments, to let off my ire I walked into the village. While there I dropped into the postoffice for the mail. I was handed the letter I had mailed to Mr. Starkweather, returned with a carrier's mark on it. "No such person there."

Slowly there came into my stupid noddle something that was scarcely credible. Mr. Starkweather was a myth. But why had this myth been conjured up? Was it for my benefit, and if so why had he been thus indicated upon me? I came to no conclusion as to this, but I concluded to conjure up a female myth to match him. I wrote a letter to myself and sent it to town to a friend to mail to me. When I received it I opened it in Miss Harley's presence, read it, put my hand to my forehead and groaned.

"What's happened?" asked my companion anxiously.

"She's very ill."

"Who? Your mother?"

"No."

"Sister?"

"No, a very dear friend."

I cast a glance out of the corner of my eye at Miss Harley and saw a combination of emotions.

"I must go to her at once," I added.

"You have not told me of this very dear friend."

"You gave me no opportunity. You were too full of your own dear friend."

She looked at me inquiringly, then smiled.

"Do you take the next train?"

"That depends upon when Mr. Starkweather is to arrive."

"Mr. Starkweather is not coming."

Her smile was broadening.

"In that case I would not think of going."

"Not even to a dear friend who is ill?"

"I fear she has passed away. The letter says she was dying when it was written."

That was the end of Mr. Starkweather. In time I found I had been invited to visit Mrs. Swinburne for the express purpose of being caught by her very dear friend Miss Harley. They had concocted Mr. Starkweather between them for a bait. The hook is still in my gills.

Jellyfish.

The bay of Naples abounds in medusae, or jellyfish, often growing as large as two feet in diameter and weighing fifty and sixty pounds. Some of them shine at night with a greenish light and are known as "noctiluca" (night lanterns) by the natives.
